Appendix B: Florida’s Recognized Senior Centers

Nationally Accredited Senior Centers

In 1998, the National Institute of Senior Centers, a constituent unit of the National Council on the Aging, developed standards for national accreditation. As of 2004, more than 100 senior centers nationwide have achieved this status, five of them being in Florida.

Accreditation requires at least one year of preparation and collaboration with community partners to complete a self-assessment of the center’s operations, including the following:

- Purpose;
- Community linkages;
- Participant-driven governance;
- Administrative policies;
- Procedures and fiscal management;
- Program planning;
- Evaluation of the quality of the center programs and their impact on the lives of participants;
- Facility’s utilization;
- Comfort and safety

Senior center directors who have completed the process report the following benefits:

- Improving and enhancing overall programs and operations;
- Assisting in determining outcome measurements; and
- Increasing public awareness about the center’s services and activities among funders, community persons, participants, and families.

Accreditation must be renewed after five years.

As of 2004, five Florida senior centers achieved national accreditation. They are as follows:

- Sunshine Senior Center, St. Petersburg, 2001
- Tallahassee Senior Center, Tallahassee, 2002
- Mary L. Singleton Center, Jacksonville, 2002
- Senior Friendship Center of Sarasota, 2003
- Kathleen Caitlin Friendship Center, Venice, 2003

For more information about national accreditation, visit www.ncoa.org, then click on “Constituent Groups,” and then NISC.

Appendix C: List of Florida’s Senior Centers
List of Florida’s Senior Centers

While Florida’s senior centers have been highly visible focal points for aging services within their individual communities for more than 40 years, only recently have they been recognized as stakeholders in the statewide aging network. Several factors contribute to a lack of awareness about Florida’s senior centers:

• Because of the autonomy of Florida’s senior centers and the absence of a formal relationship between the Department of Elder Affairs and most senior centers, there was not a DOEA staff person designated to coordinate senior center issues.

• Senior centers operate with a variety of governing bodies and multiple funding sources. These diverse funding sources may limit the regional aging services planner, the Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs), in collecting information about the senior centers not receiving funds from them. Because only 60 percent of centers receive funds distributed by the Area Agencies on Aging, many centers have not been included in the list of senior centers provided to DOEA by AAAs in the Area Plans.

The following list of senior centers has been developed by the Florida Association of Senior Centers with recent assistance from DOEA. The goal is to identify all of the senior centers in Florida, regardless of their funding sources. It is clear that this data collection will take time: Since this survey was launched in January 2004, at least 11 previously unknown senior centers have been identified.

At this time there are no identified senior centers in the following counties: Alachua, Dixie, Hardee, Highlands and Glades.
